They have weird relatives, weird foibles and little-known businesses like the rest of us. From the literary conquests of Napoleon to the study habits of Macoleum X, these famous names of history had much going on in their lives that he probably did not learn in history class. Ronald Reagan evidently had such a fun time He looked at the film towards the future in a theater once he commissioned his staff to roll the projector so you can see a particular scene from the beginning again. Photo of courtesy: Michael Evans / Wikimedia Commons Commons Reagan was very amused to A from Doc Brown’s 1955 version of how a former actor became president. Reagan himself, of course, is a former actor who became the Governor of California and then the President of the United States. Princess Diana of Wales was known for her charity work, but died in a tragic car accident at the age of 36, while former Alaska Governor Sarah Palin was running for vice president in 2008. So what do they have in common? Photo Courtesy: Bruce Tuten/Wikimedia Commons, John Mathew Smith/Wikimedia Commons Both share a common ancestor: a man named Reverend John Lathrop. He is said to have come to Massachusetts in 1630. It means Palin and Princess Diana are tenth cousins. The research came to light through experts at Ancestry.com in 2008, when he was John McCain’s deputy. Malcolm X’s writings and speeches are so compelling that it’s hard for many to believe he’s spent much of his life barely reading or writing. He engaged in a rather singular way to improve his language skills, however. Photo Courtesy: Bob Parent/Getty Images While serving a theft sentence, Malcolm X copied an entire dictionary by hand. He also read aloud what he had just written every day. Rewriting and speaking out loud the words and their definitions helped to improve her vocabulary and the pronunciation of the speech. Winston Churchill was twice appointed Prime Minister of the United Kingdom and played a key role during World War II, helping to unite the Soviet Union and the United States in an effort to defeat the Nazis. He happens to be related to the 44th President of the United States, Barack Obama. Photo Courtesy: Peter J. Souza/Wikimedia Commons, BiblioArchives / LibraryArchives/Wikimedia Commons According to genealogists, Barack Obama and Winston Churchill are ninth cousins. Obama is also a distant cousin of Brad Pitt, as the two share a common relative dating back to the 1800s. Dick Cheney is someone else. Albert Einstein didn’t like to deal with curious fans while he was in public. The famous physicist devised a rather simple but effective method to deal with such fans, however. Photo courtesy of Al. Aumuller/Wikimedia Commons If a fan approached him while he was in public, Einstein would simply apologize and tell the person he wasn’t who he thought he was. He kept telling them that he was often mistaken for Albert Einstein, but that it wasn’t really him. Queen Marie Antoinette of France is a misunderstood historical figure. He is commonly thought to be the monarch behind the infamous phrase “Let him eat the cake”, but there is little evidence to suggest he ever said it. Even so, it has become a symbol for leaders who have no contact with the people they govern. Photo Courtesy: VigAA@e-Lebrunnr/Wikimedia Commons But Antoinette did not want to be a stranger to the ordinary person. In fact, she built a whole fake village called Queen’s Hamlet, where she could dress in common clothes and pretend to live as a peasant. Hugh Hefner was known as the man at the top of the Playboy Empire. He was famous for parading in silk pajamas in his mansion full of party boys and Playboy bunnies. He was also related to the 43rd President of the United States, George W. Bush. Photo Courtesy: Eric Draper/Wikimedia Commons, Alan Light/Wikimedia Commons Bush and Hefner are tenth cousins twice removed from Bush’s mother’s side. Thomas Richards, a man who died around 1650, was their common relative. The man was Bush’s tenth great-grandfather and Hefner’s eighth great-grandfather. Both are connected to John Kerry. Alan Turing is considered the father of modern computing. During World War II, he helped to decipher German codes for Allied forces. Yes To think that a person with such a brilliant mind for technology would not be a fitted athlete, but it would be wrong in this assumption. Photo courtesy of Jimmy Sime / Getty Sime / Getty Once a marathon is completed in just two hours and 46 minutes. The time of him was only 11 minutes short of the winning time of the gold medal in the Olympics that took place the following year. This is a man with a diversified series of talent. Elizabeth Taylor was one of the most sought after Hollywood stars during his extraordinary film career, reaching the peak of her fame in the 1950s. Surprisingly, she was also tied through marriage with the Art Garfunkel musician. Photo of courtesy: Doctor Macro / Wikimedia Commons Taylor was previously married to Eddie Fisher, the father of Carrie Fisher, and Carrie was married to Paul Simon, the other half of the musical duo of Garfunkel, Simon and Garfunkel. Apparently, there are more links among the celebrities of what you might think. During the lives of him, Disney’s creator has accumulated a net worth of around $ 1 billion. It was also said Walt Disney to be a man who likes to press those who worked for him. One of those people who Disney chose to reward was the housekeeper. Photo of courtesy: Bettmann / Getty Images Every year Christmas and the birthday of him, Disney gave his warehouse in the company of him as a gift. The moment the housekeeper was in his 70s her, he had accumulated a lot of wealth. It is said that Walt Disney’s housekeeper was a multi-millionaire in his next life. She imagines taking part in a appearance contest in which every competitor was doing their best to look exactly like you. So you imagine 19 competitors who end up higher in competition, then you did. This is exactly what happened to Charlie Chaplin when he entered a Lookalike Charlie Chaplin contest. Photo of courtesy: Keystone Studios / Wikimedia Commons Chaplin looked rather unique and remarkable. The English actor and the appearance of the star of silent cinema were accentuated by his small mustache, cane and hat. There are evidently many people who seem more chapling than Chaplin took himself. The purpose of the Italian fascist benito has risen to power after the First World War and I guided his country to commit numerous atrocities during the Second World War. However, he was also the father-in-law of Sopia Loren sister. And you thought you had had when you met your significant family of the other. Photo courtesy: Public Domain / Wikimedia Commons, Portfolio Mondadori / Wikimedia Commons Loren is a famous Italian actress and the Hollywood gold ages. Sophia’s niece, Alessandra Mussolini, is the niece of Mussolini and has been a member of the European Parliament. You have lost its own re-election offer in 2019. Fidel Castro died in 2016 at the age of 90. If he had been up to the CIA, however, he wouldn’t have it anywhere near that time. In the whole cold war, it is believed that the CIA has made several attempts to assassinate the Cuban leader. In fact, some believe that the CIA has achieved over 600 separate floors or attempts to assassinate or discredit it. Photo of courtesy: Marcelo Montecino / Wikimedia Commons Commons Some of the most sideways of murdering Castro included a cigar that explodes, a holographic image of the Virgin Mary and a poisoned suit. That Castro made him at 90’s not short of incredible. Mark Twain is one of the most famous names in literature, with some of the most famous books of him, including the adventures of Huckleberry Finn and the adventures of Tom Sawyer. Twain eventually reached a nice friendship with another person famous in history: Hellen Keller. Pictures of courtesy: Public Domain / Wikimedia Commons Keller lost the ability to see, listen and speak in the tender age, but the story of her would have been inspired by many. TWAIN has also helped with her studies and her finances later in her life. Keller once wrote of Twain, “I can feel the thrill of his eye in his handshake.” Abraham Lincoln is one of the most important figures in American history. He played an important role in ending slavery in the United States and winning the Civil War. He is also a distant relative of one of the most beloved actors of our time: Tom Hanks. Photo courtesy: Conan / IMDb, Alexander Alexander Hanks has starred in films such as Forrest Gump, Cast Away and Save Private Ryan. Lincoln and Hanks are considered third cousins on the side of Lincoln’s mother, four times removed. Lincoln’s mother was a woman named Nancy Hanks. In late 1941, Winston Churchill visited President Franklin Roosevelt at the White House. Evidently, the two had a rather interesting encounter during Churchill’s stay. At the time, Pearl Harbor had just been attacked, and the United States was fully entering World War II. Photo Courtesy: BiblioArchives/Wikimedia Commons At some point during the visit, Roosevelt entered the guest room where Churchill was staying and found him completely naked. Churchill’s only response was: “The Prime Minister of Great Britain has nothing to hide from the President of the United States”. Nicholas II reigned as Russia’s last emperor from 1894 to 1917. While several factors led to the collapse of his empire, one was the successful invasion of the German Empire during World War I. Photo Courtesy: at . [Thomas Heinrich Voigt / Wikimedia Commons] [Bain News Service/ Wikimedia Commons] And who ruled the German Empire? Kaiser Wilhelm II, who was also the last emperor of his country. Both men were also related to King George V of England. All three men shared Queen Victoria as one of their grandmothers. Jeannette Rankin is the first woman politician to hold office in the United States. She was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1916 as a Republican of Montana. What makes his election in 1916 so remarkable is that women had the right to vote in the United States only in 1919. Photo Courtesy: Adam Cuerden/Wikimedia Commons Throughout her life, Rankin has been an activist and champion of women’s rights. She was involved in the women’s suffrage movement during her 20 years and eventually became president of the Montana Women’s Suffrage Association. His efforts with grassroots organizations led to his 1916 Congressional campaign. When Elvis Presley died at the age of 42 in 1977, he was believed to have died of a heart attack. Presley’s weight had increased in the last years of his life and his health was precarious. Drug abuse was also a possible contributing factor. Photo Courtesy: Ollie Atkins/Wikimedia Commons In recent years, however, other theories have been advanced about the singer’s death. One possible theory suggests Presley died of incredibly severe constipation. Presley had a very large colon at the time, which led some to believe that it played a role in his death. Abraham Lincoln once gave a speech so captivating and engaging that no one present was able to take note of it. In what is called “Lost Speech of Lincoln” the future president condomed slavery. There are only eyewitnesses of the speech, however, as no transcript was taken. Photo Courtesy: George Peter Alexander Healy/Wikimedia Commons Lincoln gave a speech at the Bloomington Convention on May 29, 1856. Attendees said Lincoln’s passionate speech was simply so moving that no reporter present could resist putting down his notes and listening to them. Lincoln would be elected president five years later, in 1861. Jesse James was a symbol of life in the Wild West known for robbing carriages, trains and banks and became a symbol for outlaws around the world. He was also related to another man known for his existence on the fringes of society, albeit to a much lesser extent: Ozzy Osbourne of heavy metal. Photo Courtesy: Egghead06/Wikimedia Commons, Public Domain/ Wikimedia Commons Osbourne is the former frontman of the Sabbath and a long-time solo artist. Osbourne did a DNA test in 2010 and found out he had a distant relative in common with Jesse James. In addition, Osbourne shares a distant relative with King George I. William Shakespeare wrote an epitaph forown grave in an effort to scare off any potential gravel-robbers. The curse reads: “Good friend for God’s sake to be/to dig out the dust enclosed here. Blessed be the man who spares these stones, and cursed be the man who moves my bones.” Photo courtesy: unbekannt nach einem GemÄlde/Wikimedia Commons Unfortunately, as far as the curse is concerned, recent reports suggest it was completely ineffective. In 2016, archaeologists scanned Shakespeare’s tomb with radar and noticed that the playwright’s famous skull appears to be missing. The skull could have been taken by serious thieves in the 18th century. Napoleon Bonaparte was a strong military leader who was eager to crush enemy armies and conquer new lands. Evidently, even the military genius had a softer side. When Napoleon wasn’t leading military units to war, he was writing a story of romance. He published a short novel entitled Clisson et Eugénie. Photo courtesy: Horace Vermet/Wikimedia Commons The plot of this book details the trials and tribulations of a soldier out at war with his love interest at home, something Napoleon had some experience with himself. Historians believe he was influenced by events in his life when he wrote the book. Mexican General Santa Anna was shot in the leg during a battle against French forces in 1938. Unfortunately for the general, the doctors told him they should have his leg amputated. Evidently, Santa Anna felt her leg was worthy of all the accolades a former soldier would receive. Photo courtesy: public domain/Wikimedia Commons After her leg was amputated, the general buried her. When he became president of Mexico a few years later, his leg was exhumed. Then he held a state funeral for it complete with all the usual honors normally reserved for whole people who die. Nikola Tesla spent his entire life as a bachelor. In addition to never marrying, it was thought that romantic relationships were limited to success. Few can argue that the Austrian inventor was quite successful. Photo courtesy: Napoleon Sarony/Wikimedia The Tesla municipalities, however, developed a very unusual relationship with a pigeon. He would go to a park in New York to feed the pigeons, and a particular white pigeon visited him every day. Tesla said he told people he loved that white pigeon the way a man loves a woman and the pigeon loved him. Amelia Earhart was a famous pilot and the first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic Ocean, among many other awards. She also insisted that her fiancé, George Putnam, sign a prenup before they were married. Photo Courtesy: public domain/Wikimedia Commons In the agreement, Earhart insisted the couple have an open marriage. The agreement reads: “I will not treat you to a medieval code of loyalty to me, nor will I consider myself bound to you in the same way.” The couple married in 1931, and Earheart dispersed in 1937. She was pronounced dead in 1939. Jesse James was a symbol of life in the Wild West. He is known for robbing stadiums, trains and banks and became a symbol for outlaws everywhere. He was also tied to another man known for the fringes of society, although to a much lesser extent: Ozzy Osbourne of heavy metal. This included cleaning and cleaning the king after using the facilities. Caligula wasn’t Roman emperor for four years before he was assassinated, but he acted rather ridiculously during that time. One of these incidents involved Caligula having his horse nominated to the Roman Senate. Photo Courtesy: Scailyna/Wikimedia Commons Caligola didn’t think his horse had much to offer the Senate. More than he and the Senate didn’t get along very well when he was given the horse to insult the other senators. Not surprisingly, many senators played a role in his assassination. Thomas Edison made numerous contributions to the society with his many inventions and innovations, and none felt stronger than Henry Ford. The two men have found a friendship in Edison’s last years. Photo Courtesy: Levin C. Handy/Wikimedia Commons Edison was on his deathbed in 1931. Ford’s son was at Edison’s side at the time of his death, and Ford told him to put Edison’s last breath in a tube. Your son followed instructions. Thomas Edison’s last breath is still enclosed in the same container and is on display at the Henry Ford (this is the full name, not a typo), a museum in Dearborn, Michigan.
